WORKING TOGETHER WITH THE LAND

Conference Co-Hosts

Dallas W. Smith

On behalf of the Chiefs, Councillors and Elders of the Nanwakolas Council, we encourage you to attend and support the third annual Aboriginal Peoples Resource Opportunities Conference. This conference is an ideal opportunity to meet and learn more about Aboriginal Peoples, our culture, our heritage and our relationships with the land and resources. It is also an ideal opportunity to learn more about how development projects between Aboriginal Peoples and the various resource sectors can and should be structured. The program for the third annual conference again features interesting speakers and a full trade show set in the wonderful Vancouver Island Conference Centre. Be sure to join us at the Ice Breaker Reception on May 9th, 7 - 9 pm.

The conference provides important opportunities to share perspectives, gain important insights, develop relationships and lay the foundation for increased investment and the creation of new opportunities for Aboriginal Peoples and the resource sector.

Pat Bell

On behalf of the Province of British Columbia, and as this year's honorary conference co-chair, I am pleased to welcome you to the third annual Aboriginal Peoples Resource Opportunities Conference.

Our government is committed to working in partnership with First Nation communities and industry to create economic opportunities that improve the lives of Aboriginal people and honour First Nations' cultural and historical relationship with the land.

British Columbia has an abundance of natural resources – whether mining, forestry, or aquaculture - that we all derive economic benefits from. The past two conferences have provided excellent opportunities for businesses and Aboriginal Peoples to develop working relationships and business relationships to better share the benefits from our natural resources.

I trust this year's conference will also provide the opportunity for more great partnerships. I wish you a successful and enjoyable conference.

Pat Bell, Minister, Forests, Mines and Lands

Who Should Attend?

- Aboriginal leaders, councillors, Elders and business leaders
- Negotiators, mediators and legal personnel involved in resource development and Aboriginal relations
- Executives, project managers and staff involved in resource development; tourism; aquaculture; minerals and mining; and power production and transmission
- Personnel involved in Aboriginal, community and government relations
- Financiers, investors and lenders
- Resource sector engineering and environmental consultants
- Economic development personnel
- Government personnel involved in resource development, land access and Aboriginal relations

"These conferences provide a real opportunity for First Nations, government and industry to meet and learn about each other and share ideas in a simple and low-key environment. Learn about past success stories, hear about new ones coming on stream and be a part of shaping future success stories."
